THE AMERICAN WAY

One of the best of our inheritances from England is the good temper with which we people of America accept the verdict of elections, and, the day after, nursing as little resentment as possible, go about our affairs as though a revolution in the conduct of the State had not been worked between sunrise and sunset.

So far as we are aware, this is the only country in the world where it is customary for the defeated candidate, swallowing his disappointment with the best face he can put on it, to send a congratulatory message to the man who has just got through laying him out. Perhaps it is a trait borrowed from the ethics of the prize-ring which, it is never to be forgotten, in spite of the barbarity of its exhibitions, has always put a good deal of stress upon fair-play and taking punishment like a man.

Be that as it may, election in other countries, Latin countries especially, very frequently are disputed arms in hand and it is quite to be expected that the faction which could not win at the polls will try to improve on the verdict through some sort of military action, the favorite one being to seize the seat of government and summarily execute a few notables of the wrong political color. This custom has a respectable antiquity as well as the merit of great and instant effectiveness to recommend it.

The temptation to go behind the returns is sometimes very strong. It was so, for example, in Kentucky a year ago. And then there is the historic case of the contest between Samuel J. Tilden and Rutherford B. Hayes, a contest that was finally referred to a Commission which two days before the inaugural date, voted to seat Hayes and Wheeler, counting his electoral vote as one more than that cast for Tilden and Hendricks. The decision was acquiesced in peaceably by the whole country and by men of every party. But, to quote the historian of the Presidency, the Democrats have never ceased to denounce the whole affair as a fraud and some newspapers have sturdily refused to speak of Mr. Hayes as having ever been rightfully in possession of the presidential office. Their anger at the time was very great, and it was excusable, since they honestly believed that Mr. Tilden was fairly elected. It is to be hoped that the patriotism of the American people and their love of peace may never again be put to so severe a test as was that to which they were subjected in 1876 and 1877.

That is a hope we can all echo.—Louisville Herald.

About Reviving the Blue Grass League
Next Year—Several Towns Named
For the Circuit, Among Them
Being Maysville.

(Lexington Leader)

Newport, Ky., November 8.—The work of organizing a Kentucky semi-pro base ball league is progressing rapidly. From the present outlook this organization will be the biggest thing attempted in the State for years.

Charles Applegate, manager of the famous Wedemans, one of the strongest semi-pro clubs of this section, is the promoter of the proposed league and is confident the managers of Kentucky will be successfully organized this season into one large league.

He is of the opinion that a league composed of the towns named below would tend to increase attendance at the different parks, also awaken the fans up a bit; Maysville, Ludlow, White Sox, Cynthiana, Paris, Winchester, Georgetown, Bellevue, Covington Standards, Danville, Wedemans, and club from Lexington.

"Just imagine," says Applegate, "if my club, Bellevue and the Standards could be near the top and the result of one or two games would have a bearing on the finish of either one club, the fans around Newport, Covington and Bellevue, would flock to the parks and all the clubs would make a carload of money. On the other hand, take Lexington, the fans would turn out strong, and as this is only a Sunday proposition, the club owners in the league would come out on the right side at the end of the season. I am willing at any time to work hand in hand with any of the managers of the above named clubs toward forming an organization of this kind and it would be the making of base ball in the Bluegrass State."

A meeting will be held in Covington the latter part of this month or the first part of December and final details of the organization will be drawn up.

It is the intention of the promoter of this league to have each club play two games with each other.

Mrs. Dora Mefford, Maysville, says: "I had been feeling poorly for some time before I knew that my kidneys were at fault. I was nervous and dizzy and my back and head ached. I rested poorly and mornings I was all tired out. I read in a local paper how a neighbor had been cured of kidney trouble by Doan's Kidney Pills. I used them and before long, I felt stronger and better and I slept good at night."

FRAUDULENT VOTING MAY FIGURE IN RESULT

Washington, November 9.—Fraudulent voting discovered by the Department of Justice is expected here to go a long way toward deciding the result of the Presidential election. The department announced today that the arrests already made—more than 200 in various parts of the country were only the beginning of the nation-wide fight against illegal balloting. Many of the persons against whom cases have been made voted in Minnesota and West Virginia. The results in these States may rest upon the evidence of fraud which the department has obtained.

Agents of the Federal Department of Justice working out of Chicago were hurriedly dispatched to Minnesota and North Dakota today, where they will watch the counting of the Presidential votes.

Hinton G. Clapp, head of the Chicago bureau, was directed by Attorney General Gregory at Washington to take personal charge at St. Paul.

Instructions to the agents were to watch for any attempts at fraud or to exert personal influence in the final work of checking up the votes in these doubtful States.

A DEAN'S ENDORSEMENT

C. F. Curtiss, dean Iowa State College, in speaking of the Chicago Stock Show, which will be held from Dec. 2 to 9, made the following statement:

"There has been something of vital importance lacking in the live stock industry of the United States since 1913. Nothing can take the place of the International Live Stock Exposition. The end of a season without an International seems like great drama with the principal character omitted. The International will be of unusual interest and of special service and value to the live stock interests this season. Never before in the history of American agriculture have the live stock interests occupied a position of such commanding importance and general interest as they do today. The International Live Stock Exposition is the culminating event of supreme importance in the animal husbandry affairs of North America."

FLEMINGSBURG LOSES TAX SUIT IN COURT

Frankfort, Ky., November 9.—Reversing the Fleming Circuit Court in the case of J. C. Hurst against the City of Flemingsburg, the Appellate Court today held that Hurst was not liable for taxes on his personal property in the city of Flemingsburg for the years 1912, 1913 and 1914. Hurst claimed that he had moved to Brown county, Ohio, and had taken his residence in that city. The court says the evidence shows that he was a resident of Brown County, Ohio, during those years and therefore was not liable for taxes in the city of Flemingsburg.

REPUBLICANS DOUBT CONSTITUTIONALITY OF VOTE IN KANSAS

Topeka, Kans., November 9—Charles Session, Republican State Chairman, announced today that legal counsel had been engaged to investigate the constitutionality of the electoral vote in Kansas. He would not say whether or not the vote would be contested.

It was claimed at Republican headquarters that the voters cast their ballots for the Presidential candidates rather than for electors. The vote for electors this year was made for the group, instead of for individual electors as in the past. Republicans say that this manner of voting was unconstitutional.

Before the ballots were prepared by the Secretary, Attorney General S. M. Brewster gave out an opinion that the electors be voted for as a group, instead of individually. The ballots were prepared in this manner and there was only one square placed at the head of the list of electors, thus making it impossible for the voter to make his individual choice, it was asserted.

In commenting upon the electoral vote in Kansas, Hubert Lardner, Democratic State Chairman, made the following announcement:

"The ticket was prepared by Secretary Brewster under an opinion by Attorney General Brewster that in voting in the square opposite each party the voter would be showing his intention to vote for the ten electors. The ballot is legal. The people voted their intention and the Secretary of State in Kansas has decided that the voters' intention must obtain in such cases."
